

BORAH ON PEACE VISIT TO PROGRESSIVES' HALL IS CHEERED TO ECHOES

SENATOR BORAH GOES AS REPUBLICAN ENVOY TO AUDITORIUM—MAKES SPEECH LAUDING TEDDY.

MAY BE DARK HORSE?

Western Statesman Looked Upon as Possibility for Harmony Candidate.—Progressives Still Hinder for "Teddy."

Auditorium Hall, Chicago, June 9.—After consideration of the platform section by section, but without reaching the final adoption, the progressive convention recessed for lunch at 1:30 p. m. until 3 p. m.

The conference committees are understood to be watching the situation to determine whether there is any use to try again to get together. This depended, it was said, on whether the republicans went on with their nomination or desired further parleys.

Borah Visits Convention.
The visit of Senator Borah was said by Mr. Perkins to be "another sign of friendly spirit between the two conventions." Mr. Perkins said he could not know what significance could be attached to the senator's visit. Some leaders suggested Borah might be the compromise nominee suggested by the republicans.

"Anyhow, we're making a record for ourselves that will set us right before the country. No matter what the outcome, we've got 'em anyway," Perkins said.

Without any preliminary announcement Senator Borah entered the Auditorium at 12:40 p. m., where the progressives were assembled.

Chairman Robbins introduced Senator Borah and the convention roared itself hoarse when the senator said he had not come officially.

"I will say 'em frankly," were his first words, "I came over here to get an inspiration."

Borah Compromise Candidate?
At once a wave swept over the hall, no one knew how, suggested stranger events than harmony with republicans, a man to unite parties, might happen. This thought grew as the senator in his speech introduced the magic name "Teddy" as the progressives' great leader.

"We want Teddy," resounded through hall and galleries with more vigor than at any time since the convention was assembled. The word "Teddy" enthusiasm, or if it was the "Teddy" burst from internal compression.

Senator Borah waited quietly and, finally, Chairman Robbins secured quiet. The senator proceeded to read a letter of affection I have for your leader, he said, and was halted by another salvo of enthusiasm.

The whole convention in a mighty shout shouting "We want Teddy" for a full minute, while Mr. Borah smilingly waited. The shouting lulled, and then was renewed, leaders of the state joining.

"There's no doubt you want Teddy," said Senator Borah. "We want Borah" answered delegates, and the senator proceeded to read a letter of praise for Roosevelt.

William B. McKinley.

Representative William B. McKinley of Illinois, former manager of Taft's presidential campaign, is this year chairman of the executive committee of the Republican congressional campaign committee. This committee will wage between now and November one of the most aggressive campaigns in the history of the Republican party.

adjoined. Signed: Geo. W. Perkins, Hiram W. Johnson, Charles J. Bonaparte, John M. Parker, Horace S. Wilkin.

After listening to the addresses by members of the progressive conference committee, the convention resumed consideration of its platform report at 12:17.

Women Win a Point.
Women delegates were victorious in striking from the progressive platform the word "male" in the declaration that every male citizen is charged with the duty of defending his country, and the word "his" was changed to "our."

All of the first paragraphs of the platform were approved by viva voce votes. Later paragraphs were approved by unanimous consent, shortening the route to process.

Mr. Lewis, holding an Indiana proxy, offered an amendment to the American plank to include criticism of murder of "Americans on the high seas."

Adopt Lewis Amendment.
The amendment read:
"Failure to deal firmly and promptly with the menace of Mexican disorder and threatened violation of rights of our citizens on the high seas, has resulted in the wanton murder of our citizens, and in the trade weakening of our national self-respect."

The convention by an overwhelming vote approved the amendment.

The progressives amended the platform to read: "We, the progressives, declare that every male citizen is charged with the duty of defending his country, and in the trade weakening of our national self-respect."

The convention by an overwhelming vote approved the amendment.

LA FOLLETTE PLANKS ARE MET WITH JEERS

EFFORT TO SUBSTITUTE SENATOR'S PLATFORM FOR G. O. P. ISSUE MEETS RIDICULOUS FAILURE.

GOSS IN HARD ORDEAL

Milwaukee Delegate Has His Own Troubles on Floor of Convention Thursday Afternoon.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Chicago, Ill., June 9.—Hisses, laughter and groaning, applause, greeted Edwin J. Goss, Milwaukee, when he submitted Senator La Follette's platform to the republican national convention Thursday afternoon. Goss' minority report, offering the La Follette platform for the majority report of the committee on resolutions, which was adopted by the convention, was thrown into the discard by a viva voce vote. It didn't get a start; the galleries played with it, and the convention declined to take it seriously.

It was a trying experience for Goss, but he made a game showing. The little applause that marked his efforts was a personal tribute to him. He was in poor voice, due to a cold and a strenuous fight before the resolutions committee. His friends think he made a good job of a hopeless task.

Chairman Warren J. Harding came to the rescue of the Milwaukeean. The galleries showed signs of becoming unduly rough with Goss, Chairman Harding rapped for order and announced that he would elect the disturbers from the Coliseum. Were it not for this there is no telling what might have happened.

One Idea Accepted.
A part of La Follette's suggestion for an international tribunal to pass on the difficulties of the resolutions committee, the platform adopted by the convention. All other suggestions presented by Goss to the committee on resolutions were rejected.

The committee turned a deaf ear to the La Follette platform, despite threats by Goss to carry the fight to the floor of the convention. Immediately following the reading of the majority report to the delegates the Milwaukeean gained the floor and read the different resolutions offered by La Follette.

He has accorded a patient hearing until he reached the "strict neutrality" resolution drafted by La Follette. Although this is considered in the light of an amicable suggestion for the defense of the country, it caused a commotion. It caused disorder. The hissing is said to have been started by Roosevelt men in the galleries, but soon extended to sections of the main floor.

Shouts of Derision.
La Follette's suggestion of a referendum on war brought forth more shouts of derision. Goss, although very hoarse and up to his eyes in tears, urged the adoption of the "strict neutrality" plank, he referred to the republican party as a progressive party which now faces the opportunity of showing its progressiveness.

Urging the adoption of the "strict neutrality" plank, he referred to the republican party as a progressive party which now faces the opportunity of showing its progressiveness.

When Goss moved that the minority report of the committee on resolutions be substituted for the majority report, he was met with a chorus of "Amen" and a heavy chorus of "Amen" drowned out a shrill few "Yesss." Then the committee report was adopted.

Elihu Root And Senator Burton Are Brought Before Convention in Order—Senator Fall to Nominate Roosevelt.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Coliseum, Chicago, June 9.—Nominations were in order at the session of the republican national convention this afternoon. Justice Hughes' name was the first to be presented and was greeted with a demonstration lasting for twenty minutes, the longest period of excitement in the convention thus far. Elihu Root was the second candidate whose name was brought before the delegates.

Whitman Presents Name.
In the course of his speech, nominating Justice Hughes, Whitman presented the name of a man named in battle for the United States and round faithful in the administration of Justice Hughes' name was the first to be presented and was greeted with a demonstration lasting for twenty minutes, the longest period of excitement in the convention thus far.

Butler Names Root.
Mr. Butler, in presenting Elihu Root of New York, said:

"He is elected, twenty-ninth president of the United States, shall nominate him, who by common consent stands with foremost statesmen of his time in this or any other land."

When Governor Willis finished, the Ohio delegation started a Burton demonstration. The delegates kept the demonstration up for twenty-three minutes; then the chairman gavelled for order.

It was announced that Roosevelt would be nominated in the republican platform by Senator Fall of New Mexico.

Nominate Du Pont.
In naming T. Coleman Du Pont of Delaware for presidential nominee before the republican national convention, Congressman Thos. W. Miller of Delaware said:

"He is one of the men who has done much to bring fame and honor to my state, whom we present to this convention as a candidate for president."

When Goss moved that the minority report of the committee on resolutions be substituted for the majority report, he was met with a chorus of "Amen" and a heavy chorus of "Amen" drowned out a shrill few "Yesss." Then the committee report was adopted.

Conference to End Feud?
Delegates to the republican and progressive national conventions assembled here this morning for a chaotic situation unprecedented in American political party history. The progressives met at 10 o'clock and republicans at 11 o'clock.

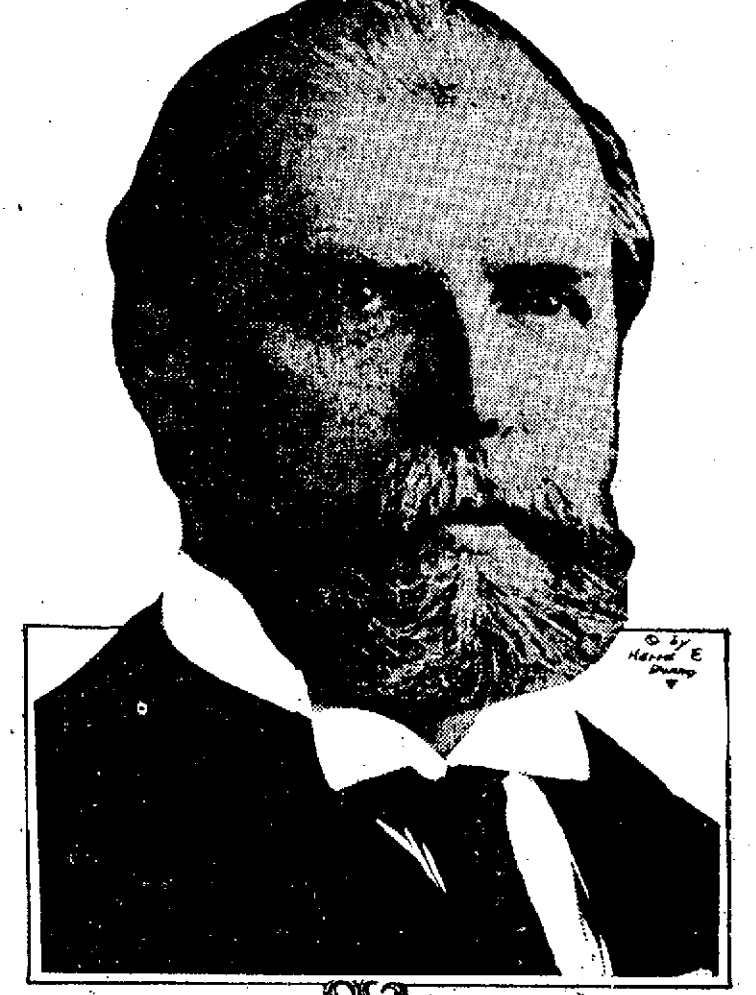

The day was ushered in by a midnight conference, that will become historic, of "peace" committees from the progressive and republican conventions, which took place at the Chicago club on Michigan boulevard. The conference adjourned before one o'clock without definite results, it was said, and details of its deliberations were withheld. The two groups met again this afternoon or tonight, or it may be only developments of the day can determine that.

It was a remarkable picture formed by men seated about the conference board, in whose hands practically rested the destinies of the republican and progressive parties.

The republican committee was composed of Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, chairman, former Senator W. Murray Crane, Massachusetts; Senator Wm. E. Borah of Idaho; Nicholas Murray Butler of New York and A. R. Johnson of Ohio.

The progressive committee has Geo. W. Perkins of New York for chairman, and other members were Governor Hiram W. Johnson of California, Charles J. Bonaparte of New York, and John M. Parker of New Orleans.

Cheer Hughes As Name Is Presented

Charles E. Hughes.

"The progressive conferees were unanimous in urging with temperance and fairness the opinion that Theodore Roosevelt of New York had so large a personal following, and such close personal relation to the issue of the coming campaign, as to make him the most favorable candidate upon which to unite."

"It was agreed that your conferees would report these facts to this convention as follows: Signed: Reed Smoot, W. Murray Crane, W. E. Borah, Nicholas Murray Butler and E. R. Johnson."

The conference committee's report was received with great enthusiasm. At the mention of Roosevelt's name, there was moderate applause, rising in volume, but deeply participated in by the galleries. It lasted about three minutes.

Chairman Harding announced that the conference committee would be continued, and then announced the recall of states for the nominations was in order.

At 11:40 the call of states for nominating speeches was begun. Arizona yielded to New York, and Governor Whitman took the platform to present the name of Justice Hughes.

At the mention of Taft's name by Governor Whitman there was an outburst of applause more notable than any that had preceded it. The band began playing. Cheering for Taft lasted six minutes.

Demonstration for Hughes.
As Governor Whitman closed and mentioned Hughes' name there was a demonstration. Apparently half the delegates joined in the demonstration.

The Oregon delegation began a march around the Coliseum, followed by a large fraction of New York, Michigan, Mississippi and Vermont delegates.

When the Hughes demonstration had lasted fifteen minutes, Chairman Harding stepped on the platform and announced that the name of Elihu Root was offered to the delegates.

At 12:33 p. m. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler took the platform to offer the name of Elihu Root.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Waukegan Court Room, June 9.—The trial of William Orpet, University of Wisconsin student, charged with the murder of Marion Lambert, his former sweetheart, will prove one of the most sensational trials since Frank Lambert, father of the dead girl, is called to the stand as a witness for the state. He will be followed on the stand, it is understood, by William Marshall of Lake Forest, who was with Mr. Lambert when the girl's body was found. All the witnesses in the case were excluded from the court room yesterday with the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lambert, parents of the girl, and Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Orpet, parents of the defendant.

CHICKEN STEALER GIVEN JAIL TERM ON LARCENY COUNT

Thomas Condon Receives Sentence for Drunkenness—Officers Here Recover Beloit Auto.

John Stevens, who is employed as a brewery laborer, proved himself to be some chicken stealer. John, however, is not of a dusky hue, nor is he a walking clothes model, with a brilliant striped shirt and a yellow straw hat, but nevertheless he can qualify as a chicken thief, for this morning he drew forty days in the municipal court for larceny.

Last Wednesday Stevens found a brooder made from a barrel, at the home of John Kehoe, Sharon street, and in it there were one old hen and fourteen nice, plump, pure bred Rhode Island Red chicks. John did not show much choice in his selection of the chickens, but took the whole caboodle, barrel, chicks and hen. When the theft was discovered the next morning by Kehoe, the ground was very soft from the incessant rain. The loser of the poultry became a detective himself, and tracked the thief in the soft mud for half a mile or more. The tracks led straight to the home of John Stevens, and the fact that Stevens carried the heavy barrel with the chickens, made his footprints unusually deep in the ground.

GIVES OUT WARNING TO GUARD VALUABLES

Chief of Police Issues Statement to Guard Against Thieves and "Dips"

Police officers were instructed by Chief of Police Champion to use extreme care in watching for thieves while the circus is in this city. The chief had reason to believe that Janesville might have an unwelcome visit from criminals, as was the case last year when a circus exhibited here. Patrolmen at the railroad station, aided by Officer Fred Gillman of Evansville, took several suspects in custody and will hold them in jail until Saturday morning, when they will be ordered to leave the city.

Since the patrolmen will be necessarily engaged in the business district, the chief requested that the citizens use care in locking their doors and caring for valuable things during the time that they will be away from their homes, and also during the night, for Janesville's barefoot burglar has succeeded in locking homes while families were asleep.

FARMER AT DELAVAN COMMITS SUICIDE

R. W. Huntley Hangs Self to Rafter of Barn Thursday Afternoon Near Delavan.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Delavan, June 9.—Ray W. Huntley, a prosperous farmer, residing one mile south of Delavan, was found hanging from a rafter in a barn by his thirteen year old son Thursday afternoon, about six o'clock. The suicide of Mr. Huntley has not been explained by the Delavan authorities. No direct reason for his act has been determined.

In the afternoon Mr. Huntley had been in Delavan and drove to his home without giving evidence that he planned to execute himself. On reaching his farm he remained in the house for a few moments, and then left to go to the stable. An hour later the mother sent the small boy to the barn to call the father. The child found the remains hanging at the end of a short rope attached to the rafter. Mr. Huntley leaves a wife, one son and a mother. Mrs. Mary Huntley, of Nebraska.

NEW POLICE BRIDEGROOM IS BACK ON THE JOB

This morning the new police department bridegroom, Chief of Police Peter D. Champion, attired in civilian clothes and with a broad smile on his face, appeared at the police station. After the officers and employees at the city hall exchanged the usual greetings and remarks to a newly-wed, the chief stated he was back on the job after spending his honeymoon in Chicago.

The officers and those connected to the city hall are still trying to figure out how the chief was able to have the nuptial knot tied at Rockford, Illinois, and yet not have any person in Janesville aware of the fact until very late in the afternoon Tuesday, after the ceremony was performed. Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Champion will be at home to their friends after August first, at 13 South Academy street.

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

CHAPTER 69.

With a simple outfit and school teacher can initiate her pupils into the discarded wonders of the grain known as wheat. The hair of women will be less thin and lustreless and the bald-headed man will have more hair to engage his attention when school children, destined to be our future men and women, are permitted to see and understand the nature of these neglected wonders.

As school teachers take their classes on inspection tours through the patent flour mills of Brooklyn the commercial chemist who pilot them from granary to silo and from silo to flourer always volunteers the information that the white patent flour is incomparably superior to whole wheat flour.

"White flour is more nutritious than any mulatto-colored product ever milled," they say. "Professor Harry Snyder says so."

The teachers, impressed by the very intensity of their surroundings, and the really extraordinary experience of watching a battery of mills in operation in a large plant, go back to their homes perfectly satisfied that white bread will do after all.

It does not seem to occur to them that Professor Harry Snyder is employed by the millers, whereas Professor Scott Nearing is not employed by the University of Pennsylvania.

It never occurs to them that should Professor Harry Snyder speak out in meeting as Professor Scott Nearing has spoken, the patent flour would have as little use for him as the University of Pennsylvania has had for the now internationally famous victim of starvation.

Any school teacher who wants the truth can have it for herself without reference to Professor Harry Snyder. All she needs are three pieces of grits known as No. 30, No. 50 and No. 60; three pieces of silk bolting cloth, known as No. 9, No. 10 and No. 12; a small Fairbank's scale with weights measurable by the scale; a second of an ounce for rough estimates; a magnifying glass that will enlarge ten diameters or a small microscope that will enlarge 100 diameters.

With this outfit if the school teacher will take eight ounces of Knox Crutchfield's whole wheat meal or Bennett's Wheatworth whole wheat meal, and put them through the simple outfit suggested here some disclosures will be made that will prove little short of startling.

The reason I have mentioned the Crutchfield and Bennett meal is because every city in the United States gives shelter to hundreds of packages of so-called entire wheat flour which, not being entire wheat at all, neither are they so labeled and suffer no legal interference through their deception, will not serve our purposes.

If the school teacher will carefully sift the eight ounces of whole wheat meal through the No. 30 grits gauge, except approximately 1.36-32 of an ounce passes through the gauge.

With the magnifying glass the result of the first sifting will make an interesting topic for study in the class room. The teacher will discover that the 1.36-32 of an ounce left on the No. 30 grits gauge consists of large particles of bran and germ with the husk flour that adheres to the bran.

Under a powerful glass the bran is found to consist of rough, canavaskie, brownish particles, with a very remarkable suggestion of wool and woolly germ, difficult to distinguish from bran with the naked eye. It will be found to consist of rich, oily, cream-colored particles.

A chemical analysis of this bran and germ, which take up large quantities of water and aid in the intestines for lubricating purposes, shows that they contain the mineral salts, colloids and vitamins which we get from rich foods, phosphorus, nitrogen, iron, iodine, potassium, manganese, phosphorus, nucleic proteins, or phosphorized albumen, lecithins, or phosphorized fats, and the simple phytin compounds and phosphates without which, as has been conclusively proved in the St. Petersburg experiment, no animal can be properly nourished.

The woman who values the very thin and lustreless hair that remains to her, and the bald-headed man who wishes he had some hair to value, even thin and lustreless hair, will look with profound interest upon the discarded silicon which has just been measured, and the anemic creature who seeks in vain for solace in beefsteak and wine will wish that the miller would not throw all this elemental food to the hogs.

The teacher is now ready for operation No. 2. By sifting the balance of the wheat through grits gauge No. 50 it will be found that 1.53-32 of an ounce will remain on the gauge. Under the magnifying glass these particles, less coarse than those that were sifted out first, will be identified as bran, germ, and middlings.

No handsomer breakfast food ever appeared on the market, and yet such breakfast food is known only to hogs. The color, so necessary to bloated Nature in her calcification of tuberculous areas will be disclosed under chemical analysis in these rejected ketones of the human arch.

The school teacher's pupils will say, "Do we not eat this beautiful stuff that has just been held back by grits gauge No. 50?" and the school teacher will say, "No, dear children this is cattle food."

nated sources, is superior to distilled water. It is doubtful that the minerals in natural water are present in assimilable form.

However, they do serve as a mineral sparer in that water which is saturated with minerals does not abstract from the tissues the minerals natural to them and necessary to their health.

Q.—In purifying and settling water that is used by cities and towns, are not elements used that should not enter the system? May not this unnatural treatment be one of the causes of hardening of the arteries, and may it not also cause any other of the common diseases of the present generation?

A. It is generally agreed that modern methods of treating the water supply of large cities with hypochlorites and other chemicals constitute much less of a menace to public health than the living bacteria which such waters if untreated would contain.

It is argued that it is better to die of hardening of the arteries twenty or thirty years from now than to die of typhoid next week. Little is known as to whether the use of the chemicals employed followed by any injurious effects or not.

However, as a people we are so indifferent to the pollution of our water sheds and so indecent in our methods of sewage disposal that it is well to make a change in these addle-headed departments of civilization we should cultivate resignation to our lot.

It is better to consume a few more or less harmful chemicals, the function of which is to destroy millions of disease-producing organisms that, having suffered assault and battery at the hands of these chemicals, reach us in such a dazed, battered, feeble or dead condition that they can be said to be harmless, than to drink the noxious living creatures that are responsible for so many diseases.

Meat should be eliminated entirely or consumed in very small quantities. All food should be eaten slowly and masticated thoroughly, but no such advice as Fletcherism should be attempted.

No food, however normal, natural or unadulterated, under such conditions, can work miracles. Good food must be accompanied by judicious exercise, walks, fresh air, and plentiful bathing. The inside of the body must not only be kept clean but the outside, which is just as important, must be kept as clean and for the same reason, windows should be kept open during sleep. The best cure for anemia is iron and oxygen. Oxygen is ready at hand to do the work in all fresh air, but the iron must be selected from the farm rather than from the pharmacy. Iron is found in assimilable form in the foods outlined.

Q.—Which is better, water as nature furnishes it or distilled water, as it is furnished by the laboratory? Are not some of the elements lost in the distilling of water?

A.—Water as nature furnishes it, provided it comes from uncontaminated sources, is superior to distilled water. It is doubtful that the minerals in natural water are present in assimilable form.

However, they do serve as a mineral sparer in that water which is saturated with minerals does not abstract from the tissues the minerals natural to them and necessary to their health.

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question—I have a cow with an unusually large udder, and it is not yet time for her to calve. My neighbors say she should be milked but I am doubtful about that being best as the udder is not hard or tender to the touch. What would you advise?

Answer—In general it is best to work along lines indicated by nature. In this case then, the cow should not be milked until she drops her calf. With heavy milkers it is a common thing for the udder to become very large. Keep the cow's bowels open by means of laxative feed and let nature take its course. See to it that the cow has plenty of exercise. It is best to turn it out into rich clover pasture at this time of year, just previous to calving, but she is better off out of doors than in a hot, stuffy stall. Many farmers think that the dreaded milk fever may be avoided by keeping the udder from becoming too full or that the trouble originates in the congested blood. This is not the case. Breeders in the island of Jersey have found that the bag for 12 to 24 hours after calving has almost abolished the mortality from milk fever.

Question—While grubs are working on my barley, I fear they are going to ruin it. In case I am obliged to place so as not to lose the use of my ground?

Answer—The ground can be put in to Yankee corn for fodder or it may be used for rye or millet. Rye and millet are good pasture for all kinds of stock. It may be sown as late as July. Millet may also be sown in July and if the frost holds off late enough may be used for selling, or it may be cut for hay.

In this connection it is well to give some consideration to means for lessening the damage during 1916 due to white grubs. The United States department of agriculture makes the following recommendations:

Fighting White Grubs.
In order to lessen the damage during 1916 from the spring feeding of white grubs, the U. S. department of agriculture makes the following recommendations:

1. If the ground is to be plowed or cultivated in the spring, delay plowing as late as possible, or until the grubs have returned to near the surface (about the last of April) and have the chickens follow the plow to destroy the grubs that are turned up.

2. Delay planting until the 15th or 20th of May or a little later if practicable. The object of this is to have the roots of the young plants develop so late that this year's large grubs will not have much chance to do damage before they become dormant in June.

3. When possible, on land that is infested with grubs, avoid planting corn, timothy, strawberries, or early potatoes.

In controlling this pest, rotations are specially important. A rotation of oats, clover, and corn has proven very satisfactory in some sections. Ground which is in corn, or has a heavy stand of pure clover during the year the beetles are flying, which will be the 1917 stage of this pest, in the infested area, will ordinarily contain few grubs, as the beetles will not seek such land for making their eggs. The beetles prefer land in small grains, timothy, or covered with weeds for egg laying. Land which is in oats during the flight of the beetles will contain many grubs the next year, but if clover, which is one of the least susceptible crops, follows, the grubs will injure that crop but slightly. Aside from this rotation it is desirable to so arrange the land that the least amount of land will be in timothy and small grain the year (1917) the beetles are abundant, and the following year (1918) plant corn on corn ground, and use for small grain and timothy the ground which was in these crops the previous year.

Question—I want to plow up my meadow as soon as I cut my hay. Is there any crop I can plant there?

Answer—Plant rye or millet as advised in the answer to the previous question.

Question—How much lead arsenate is required to kill worms on gooseberry bushes?

Answer—Dissolve a teaspoonful in a quart of water, first adding a little water to the lead arsenate so as to make a paste before adding to rest of the water.

News Item.
The boys of the agricultural department of the high school have this spring tested 4,000 ears of corn, some of it at home and some at school. In addition to those one boy working with his father has tested 1,700 ears. If all this corn had been good it would plant about 350 acres.

LEARN HOW TO SWIM

In a Series of Ten Articles Famous Expert
Louis De B. Handley of the N. Y. A. C.
Gives Advice to Beginners and Veterans.

Article No. 9. — Life Saving.

By LOUIS DE B. HANDLEY.
(Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.)

IGNORANCE of the methods of caring for the apparently drowned nowadays is quite inexcusable. As pointed out in a previous article, the rescue of those in danger requires considerable personal skill and practice, but any one can learn all that is needed for handling the unconscious victim of a water accident by merely reading attentively and retentively the prescribed rules, so that neglect to do so cannot be condoned. It happens frequently that absolutely inexperienced swimmers are able to reach one in danger by boat and perform a rescue without so much as exposing themselves to a wetting. If they can then administer the proper treatment all is well. On the other hand, failure to operate artificial respiration promptly and correctly or to apply the given remedies later may have fatal results even after the victim has been taken from the water.

Consideration of these facts should urge upon every man and woman the

it is much easier to calculate on one's own breathing.

Operation on the patient should be continued until his lungs resume their functions and the chest begins to expand and contract unaided. At times a few minutes of work will bring results; at others it is necessary to persist assiduously for a long period before being rewarded.

Indeed, cases are on record of men and women having been revived after half an hour and more under water and as much as four hours of uninterrupted treatment—in other words, after nearly five hours of deathlike unconsciousness.

This should be borne in mind when a patient is slow to recover and one is inclined to become discouraged and cease trying. Don't lose hope. A human life is at stake.

Once natural respiration is restored it is all important to activate the blood circulation, always sluggish at first, and then bring the lowered temperature of the body to normal.

An excellent means of attaining this object is to resort to massage, stroking and kneading the muscles rapidly, but Schaefer (or prone pressure) method of operating artificial respiration. Lay patient face down, head resting sideways on bent arm; kneel across him, facing the head; rest both hands on small of back with hands near the spine and fingers embracing the lower ribs. Press down and forward for about four seconds; then release pressure suddenly for one second and continue process until patient begins to breathe naturally.

necessity of fitting themselves for eventualities irrespective of their ability as swimmers.

Needless to say, medical advice is always to be sought at once, if circumstances permit, when a drowning accident occurs. As, however, one is at times called upon to act alone, far from all assistance, we will speak of the best course to follow single-handed.

Various methods of resuscitation are now in use—the Howard, Sylvester, Schaefer and others—and many maintain that there is very little choice between them. This is a mistake. It has been proved beyond question—by numerous and convincing experiments—that the Schaefer method forces considerably more air into the lungs than the others. In addition, the position of the body not only facilitates the outflow of swallowed water, but prevents the tongue from falling back and obstructing the respiratory channel, so that its superiority must be obvious to any one giving the matter a moment's thought. It is, in fact, the only system known which can be operated by one person effectively and instantly.

In using the Schaefer (or prone pressure) method the first thing to be done upon getting the unconscious victim ashore or on board is to lay him gently face down on an even surface, possibly with the head slightly lower than the feet. Then one kneels across the body, passes the hands around the waist until they meet over the abdomen and lift at the same time working the palms inward and upward to get rid of any water which may have been taken in.

This accomplished, the patient's arm is raised above his shoulder and bent at the elbow, his head rested upon it, his face turned to any stirring breeze, the mouth and nostrils wiped clean of phlegm and mucus and the tongue drawn out. Then one is ready for artificial respiration.

Again straddling the patient, facing his head, one rests both hands on the small of his back, thumbs near the spine, fingers open and curving over the lower ribs, and bends forward, pressing firmly downward and upward for about four seconds, thus forcing out the poisonous gases formed in the lungs; then suddenly straightens up and releases pressure, so that the constricted ribs return to normal position with a spring, causing a good intake of pure oxygenated air.

The aim of artificial respiration should be to imitate natural breathing, so that any one may estimate approximately the time of pressures and releases by noting his or her own inhaling and exhaling under ordinary conditions. The larger the subject, however, the slower should be the movements, the greater the force applied. One is generally instructed to make twelve to fifteen full (double) movements a minute, but few people can count the seconds accurately, and without force. Start at the thighs and gradually work down to the feet as the treated parts warm; then pass to the arms and body. But always stroke and rub toward the heart.

After being massaged the patient should be put to bed if possible, otherwise wrapped up snugly in blankets or any available clothing and made to take a long rest. There is serious danger of congestion of the lungs and other troubles for some time after the ordeal of drowning, and precautions should be taken.

In fact, if chills are noticed after the patient has been wrapped up every effort should promptly be devoted to inducing warmth. Hot water bottles and hot cloths applied to the feet, stomach and nupts usually give immediate results, and if better conveniences are lacking it is generally possible to heat bricks or stones over an impromptu beach fire to serve the same purpose.

Stimulants in very small doses are also beneficial. For instance, tablespoonfuls of brandy or whisky, preferably diluted in double the quantity of hot water, may be administered at intervals of ten or fifteen minutes with good result.

Throughout the period of resuscitation plenty of fresh air is essential to the patient. If a crowd forms, as it always will at a bathing resort, while you are operating respiration ask the aid of a few bystanders in clearing a wide space around you. And later in seeking a place for the revived person to rest in choose a well ventilated room or shack and leave the windows open to provide free circulation.

As it is at times necessary or advisable to carry the unconscious victim of a drowning accident some distance on shore, it may be well to tell how it can be done readily—by the life saver's land carry, which enables one to lift and support a person twice one's own size and weight. It is best to use it upon reaching shallow water, but one may also raise the body from the ground after turning it face up.

Seize the victim's right wrist with your left hand and lift; pass your right arm through his crotch; bend down so that you can lower your head under his right arm until the armpit rests on your neck; then straighten up slowly and the body will be draped over your right shoulder. Now shift the hold on the wrist from your left to your right hand without removing the right arm from its through crotch position, and the patient can be carried without effort, leaving your left hand and arm free to balance your advance and be used if necessary.

This carry is valuable in all kinds of accidents, but especially so in assisting the apparently drowned, because the pressure applied upon the stomach at every step you take first forces out all the water, then acts in the guise of artificial respiration.

67 DAISY DEAN

"By Fate's Decree" is the title of picture in which Dorothy Phillips will star in the near future. The male lead—played by Lon Chaney—is a young man who gives himself up to the police to prevent his father from being arrested. At this time the youth first learns that his father, although his source of income had always been a mystery to the entire family, had been a second-story man. The son is sent to prison and released on good behavior at the end of three years. In the meantime his father dies without revealing to the family his past life, or making confession that would release the son. Misfortune follows the son, and he is unable to secure employment or find his family. Discouraged he goes to a river to commit suicide. The feminine lead is that of a girl cared for by a man who forces her to pick up the rubbish from the streets. To escape further treatment, she runs away and has about the same experience as the son. They meet at the river and talk each other out of taking their own life. From that time on they are pals. The story runs through five exciting reels.

SHE THOUGHT IT WAS NAME OF A PLAY.

In the movie studios, after a scene is completed an assistant holds up in front of the camera a slate on which is written the name of the director as the number given the play. This is for keeping track of the scenes in the developing rooms and is necessary in studios where several directors are at work on different plays at one time.

Director J. G. Edwards was at work in the studios on a play identified as "Edward II." A visitor asked a new actress the name of the play then being made. "I don't know," she said. "But I think it's 'Edward The Second.'"

Billie Burke in "Peggy."

One of the features of "Peggy," at the Beverly tonight, is its group of scenes in fairyland. Billie Burke, who is the star of the play, starts out to lead a group of children a fairy tale. She has been tinkering on her auto and is in overalls. As she sits on the running board of her car, she holds one foot on her knee, while the others perch alongside or behind her.

As heroine of her own fairy story, Miss Burke is then shown tripping through the moonlight. First she meets a bevy of gnomes, with grotesque faces and horns, and wearing fantastic peaked caps and gowns, then she finds herself in an assemblage of bugs, one of which is a fairy prince, disguised by a wicked old witch.

The witch, the partner in the tale of the evil prince, now king of the bugs, is then Peggy flies to a wise old goblin, and procures from him some magic wafers. This she scatters over the bug world and he becomes the fairy prince again, gracefully offering his hand and his heart to the pretty maiden.

The witch, sorely vexed, swells up till she can no more leave her narrow-door house.

A striking bit of photography is that in which Peggy throws the magic wafers on the bug. "Presto!" up stands the prince—a startling transformation.

"ANURIC!" THE NEWEST DISCOVERY IN CHEMISTRY

This is a recent discovery of Doctor Pierce, who is head of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N. Y. Experiments at Doctor Pierce's Hospital for several years proved that there is no other eliminator of uric acid that can be compared to it. For those easily recognized symptoms of inflammation—as backache, scalding urine and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, it is simply wonderful how surely "Anuric" acts. The best of results are always obtained in cases of acute rheumatism in the joints, in gravel and gout, and invariably the pains and stiffness which so frequently and persistently accompany the disease rapidly disappear.

Go to your nearest drug store and simply ask for a 50-cent package of "Anuric," manufactured by Dr. Pierce, or even write Doctor Pierce for a free sample. If you suspect kidney or bladder trouble, send him a sample of your water and describe symptoms. Doctor Pierce's chemist will examine it, then Dr. Pierce will report to you, without fee or charge.

Note:—French scientists affirm that "Anuric" is thirty-seven times more active than lithia in eliminating uric acid, and is a harmless but reliable chemical compound that may be safely given to children, but should be used only by grown-ups who actually wish to restore their kidneys to perfect health, by conscientiously using one box or more in extreme cases—as "Anuric" (thanks to Doctor Pierce's achievement) is by far the most perfect kidney and bladder corrector obtainable.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the original Little Liver Pills. One Little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.

Alkali in Soap Bad For the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary purified coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, which rinses out easily removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky; bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get multisided coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of your family for months.

She Could Hardly Turn in Her Bed

Woman Tells How She Has Recovered Her Health by Using Tanlac.

Miss Viola Fohl, of 30 South Boardman street, Fond du Lac, has recently had a most pleasant experience about which she is now telling all her friends. This is the statement she made a few days ago:

"For some time I suffered a great deal from kidney trouble and, although I tried a lot of different remedies, I got no relief. I had the most severe pains in my back and sometimes could hardly bend over. When I would sit down I could hardly get up and when I would lie down for a few hours I would hardly be able to turn over or get up again. I had but very little energy because I was all run down and rarely felt like moving about. I did not sleep very well at nights and on awakening would feel simply awful and would just drag about all day.

"Some time ago I read of the great good that was being done by Tanlac, the new medicine, in just such cases as mine and decided to give it a trial. I got a bottle and had taken but a few doses when I realized that I had found what I had been looking for. I soon began to regain my strength and energy and to get to feeling much better all around. I now get along with out a single pain. I can do anything I want and not be troubled in the least. I eat well and sleep well and have loads of energy and ambition. I always recommend Tanlac to all my friends because I know that it will do the work."

Tanlac may be obtained here at Smith's Drug Store.

Sheridan did not speak—he stared, astounded and incredulous; and Bibbs had left the room before any of its occupants uttered a sound, though he went as slowly as he came. Mrs. Sheridan was the first to move. She went nervously back to the doorway, and then out into the hall. Bibbs had gone from the house.

Bibbs' mother had a feeling about him then that she had never known before; it was indefinite and vague, but very poignant—something in her mourned for him uncomprehendingly. She felt that an awful thing had been done to him, though she did not know what it was. She went up to his room.

The fire George had built for him was almost smothered under thick, charred ashes of paper. The lid of his trunk stood open, and the large upper tray, which she remembered to have seen full of papers and notebooks, was empty. And somehow she understood that Bibbs had given up the mysterious vocation he had hoped to follow—and that he had given it up for ever. She thought it was the wisest thing he could have done—and yet, for an unknown reason, she sat upon the bed and wept a little before she went downstairs.

So Sheridan had his way with Bibbs, all through.

CHAPTER XXIX.

As Bibbs came out of the new house, a Sunday trip was in course of passage upon the sidewalk. An ample young woman, plump of face; a black-clad, thin young man, whose expression was one of habitual anxiety, habitual wariness and habitual eagerness. He propped a perambulator containing the third—and all three were newly cleaned, Sundayed, and made fit to dine with the wife's relatives.

"How'd you like for me to be that young fella, mamma?" the husband whispered. "He's one of the sons, and there ain't but two left now."

The wife stared curiously at Bibbs. "Well, I don't know," she returned. "He looks to me like he had his own troubles."

"I expect he has, like anybody else," said the young husband, "but I guess we could stand a good deal if we had his money."

"Well, maybe, if you keep on the way you been, baby. I'll be as well fixed as the Sheridans. You can't tell. She glanced back at Bibbs, who had turned north. "He walks kind of slow and stooped over, like."

"So much money in his pockets it makes him sag, I guess," said the young husband, with bitter admiration.

Mary, happening to glance from a window, saw Bibbs coming, and she started, clasping her hands together in a sudden alarm. She met him at the door.

"Bibbs!" she cried. "What is the matter? I saw something was terribly wrong when I— You look—" She paused, and he came in, not lifting his eyes to hers. Always when he crossed that threshold he had come with his head up and his wistful gaze seeking hers. "Ah, poor boy," she said, with a gesture of understanding and pity. "I know what it is!"

He followed her into the room where they always sat, and sank into a chair. "You needn't tell me," she said.

"They've made you give up. Your father's won—you're going to do what he wants. You've given up."

Still without looking at her, he inclined his head in affirmation.

She gave a little cry of compassion, and came and sat near him. "Bibbs," she said, "I can be glad of one thing, though it's selfish. I can be glad you came straight to me. It's more to me than even if you'd come because you were happy." She did not speak again for a little while; then she said: "Bibbs—dear—could you tell me about it? Do you want to?"

Still he did not look up, but in a voice, shaken and husky, he asked her a question so grotesque that at first she thought she had misunderstood his words.

"Mary," he said, "could you marry me?"

"What did you say, Bibbs?" she asked, quietly.

His tone and attitude did not change.

"Will you marry me?"

Both her hands leaped to her cheeks—she grew red and then white. She rose slowly and moved backward from him, staring at him, at first incredulously, then with an intense perplexity, and more luminous in her wide eyes; it was like a spoken question. The room filled with strangeness in the long silence—the two were so strange to each other. At last she said:

"What made you say that?"

He did not answer.

"Bibbs, look at me!" Her voice was loud and clear. "What made you say that? Look at me!"

He could not look at her, and he could not speak.

"What was it that made you?" she said. "I want you to tell me."

She went closer to him, her eyes ever brighter and wider with that intensity of wonder. "You've given up—to your father," she said, slowly. "And then you come to ask me—"

She broke off. "Bibbs, do you want me to marry you?"

"Yes," he said, just audibly.

"No!" she cried. "You do not. Then what made you ask me? What is it that has happened?"

"Nothing."

"Wait," she said. "Let me think. It's something that happened since our walk this morning—yes, since you left me at noon. Something happened—that—"

She stopped abruptly, with a tremulous murmur of amazement and dawning comprehension. She remembered that Bibbs had gone to the new house.

Bibbs swallowed painfully and contrived to say, "I do—I do want you to marry me, if—if you could."

She looked at him, and slowly shook her head. "Bibbs, do you—"

Her voice was as unsteady as his—little more than a whisper. "Do you think I'm—in love with you?"

"No," he said.

Somewhere in the still air of the room there was a whispered word; it did not seem to come from Mary's parted lips, but he was aware of it.

"Why?"

"I've had nothing but dreams," Bibbs said, desolately. "But they weren't like this. Bibbs said no girl could care about me. He smiled faintly, though still he did not look at Mary. "And when I first came home Edith told me Bibbs was so anxious to marry that she'd have married me. She meant it to express Bibbs' extremity, you see. But I hardly needed either of them to tell me. I hadn't thought of myself as—well, not as particularly captivating."

Oddly enough, Mary's pallor changed to an angry flush. "Those two!" she exclaimed, sharply; and then, with thoroughgoing contempt: "Lamhorn! That's like them!" She turned away.

"Mary, Mary!" He Cried Helplessly.

went to the bare little black mantel, and stood leaning upon it. Presently she asked: "When did Mrs. Roscoe Sheridan say that 'no girl' could care about you?"

"Today."

Mary drew a deep breath. "I think I'm beginning to understand—a little." She bit her lip; there was anger in good truth in her eyes and in her voice. "Answer me once more," she said.

"Bibbs, do you know now why I stopped wearing my furs?"

"Yes," she said, just audibly.

"No!" she cried. "You do not. Then what made you ask me? What is it that has happened?"

"Nothing."

"Wait," she said. "Let me think. It's something that happened since our walk this morning—yes, since you left me at noon. Something happened—that—"

"No," he said.

Somewhere in the still air of the room there was a whispered word; it did not seem to come from Mary's parted lips, but he was aware of it.

Oddly enough, Mary's pallor changed to an angry flush. "Those two!" she exclaimed, sharply; and then, with thoroughgoing contempt: "Lamhorn! That's like them!" She turned away.

"Never! Never for an instant!"

"You didn't believe I'd tried to make you want to marry me?"

"No, no, no!"

"I believe it, Bibbs. You thought that I was fond of you; you knew I cared for you—but you didn't think I might be—in love with you. But you thought that I might marry you without being in love with you because you did believe I had tried to marry your brother, and—"

"Mary, I only knew—for the first time—that you—that you were—"

"Were desperately poor," she said. "You can't even say that! Bibbs, it was true: I did try to make him want to marry me. I did! And she sank down into the chair, weeping bitterly again. Bibbs was agonized.

"Mary," he groaned, "I didn't know you could cry."

"Listen," she said. "Listen till I get through—I want you to understand. We were poor, and we weren't fitted to be. We never had been, and we didn't know what to do. We'd been almost rich; there was plenty, but my father wanted to take advantage of the growth of the town; he wanted to be richer, but instead—well, just about the time your father finished building next door we found we hadn't anything. People say that sometimes, meaning that they haven't anything in comparison with other people of their own kind, but we really hadn't anything—we hadn't anything at all, Bibbs! And we couldn't do anything. You might wonder why I didn't try to be a stenographer—and I wonder myself why, when a family loses its money, people always say the daughters ought to go and be stenographers. It's curious—as if a wave of the hand made you into a stenographer. No, I'd been raised to be either married comfortably or a well-to-do old maid, if I chose not to marry. The poverty came on slowly. Bibbs, but at last it was all there—and I didn't know how to be a stenographer. I didn't know how to be anything except a well-to-do old maid or somebody's wife—and I couldn't be a well-to-do old maid."

Then, Bibbs, I did what I'd been raised to know how to do. I went out to be fascinating and be married. I did it openly, at least, and with a kind of decent honesty. I told your brother I had meant to fascinate him and that I was not in love with him, but I let him think that perhaps I meant to marry him. I think I did mean to marry him. I had never cared for anybody, and I thought it might be there really wasn't anything more than a kind of excited fondness. I can't be sure, but I think that though I did mean to marry him I never should have done it, because that sort of a marriage is—it's sacrilege—something would have stopped me. Something did stop me; it was your sister-in-law, Sibyl. She meant no harm—but she was horrible, and she put what I was doing into such horrible words—and they were the truth—oh! I saw myself! She was proposing a miserable compact; with me—and I couldn't breathe the air of the same room with her, though I'd so cheapened myself she had a right to assume that I would. But I couldn't! I left her, and I wrote to your brother—just a quick scrap. I told him just what I'd done: I asked his pardon, and I said I would not marry him. I posted the letter, but he never got it. That was the afternoon he was killed. That's all, Bibbs. Now you know what I did—and you know—me!"

She pressed her clenched hands tightly against her eyes, leaning far forward, her head bowed before him.

Bibbs had forgotten himself long ago; his heart broke for her. "Couldn't you— Isn't there— Won't you—"

He stammered. "Mary, I'm going with father. Isn't there some way you could use the money without—without—"

She gave a choked little laugh.

"You gave me something to live for," he said. "You kept me alive. I think—and I've hurt you like this!"

"Not you—oh no!"

"You could forgive me, Mary?"

"Oh, a thousand times!" Her right hand went out in a faltering gesture, and just touched his own for an instant. "But there's nothing to forgive."

"And you can't—you can't—"

"Can't what, Bibbs?"

"You couldn't—"

"Marry you?" she said for him.

"Yes."

"No, no, no!" She sprang up, facing him, and, without knowing what she did, she set her hands upon his breast, pushing him back from her a little. "I can't, I can't! Don't you see?"

"Mary—"

"No, no! And you must go now, Bibbs; I can't bear any more—please—"

"Never, never, never!" she cried, in a passion of tears. "You mustn't come any more. I can't see you, dear! Never, never, never!"

Somewhat, in helpless, stumbling obedience to her beseeching gesture, he got himself to the door and out of the house.

Says She Was Saved From Operating Table

Brother and Sister Both Relieved by Simple Remedy Available to Any One.

In her gratitude for a remedy that saved her from the possible necessity for an operation, Mrs. Carrie Hefflin, of Coats, Kans., writes: "Had it not been for Fruitola any Traxo I might have been on the operating table by now. It relieved me of at least one hundred and fifty gall stones. It surely does work wonders. My brother also had suffered for years and has been greatly benefited by Fruitola and Traxo."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs, softening the congested masses, disintegrating the hardened particles that cause so much suffering and expels the accumulation in an easy, natural way.

Traxo is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach with most beneficial results and is recommended for use in connection with Fruitola to build up and restore the weakened, run-down system.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus Laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In Janesville they can be obtained at J. P. Baker, 123 W. Milwaukee St.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Second Quarter. Lesson XI. Galatians VI. 1-10. June 11, 1916.
SOWING AND REAPING.

In the third century B. C. a horde of Gauls from what is now upper-France overran Asia-Minor and finally settled down and gave their name to the district afterwards known as Galatia. In this main stock were various elements of Celtic and Greek and small colonies of trafficking Jews. But the restless Gallic temperament dominated. When St. Paul entered the region with his gospel it was accepted with proverbial Celtic speed and fervor. But soon after his departure the apostle learned with sorrow that these mercurial converts had turned to another gospel. They had fallen easy prey to the hyphenated Jewish-Christian faction which taught that they could be Christians. The object of this epistle is to counteract this error, break the witchery that the ceremonial law was having over his converts who had never heard of it before, and bring them to a pure faith again. The purpose of the apostle is to restore them to the liberty which they had when they first accepted his message. The epistle is fairly Celtic in its vivacity, fervor and abrupt transitions, and is admirably adapted to the temperament of the people addressed. The apostle with it all is careful to shiver himself from any appearance of contempt for the law. But he is equally careful to show how subordinate all ceremony is to faith as a means of salvation. He reminded them that he had at first shown himself as a Jew, when coming to them perhaps with his falling vision, they were fairly ready to pluck out their own eyes and give them to him. Where now was that warm loyalty? He must now even defend the validity of his apostleship and describe the course of his life to the present. Then he cuts at once the Gordian knot of the Jewish contention for the perpetuity and universality of the ceremonial law. He shows how the patriarch Abraham was accounted righteous by faith alone, as at his time the law had not yet been given. He proceeds to show the law as subordinate and preparatory, and exemplified in the allegory of Hagar and Ishmael, and finally fulfilled in Christ. He then sounds the alarm of danger in reverting to the law. The epistle closes in no mist of vague theorizing, but in clear cut exhortations based upon immovable argument which had preceded. Exempt from the law, which was never designed for them, why go back and assume its obligations? Why not stand fast in their exemption? Only a caution must be given to these warm-blooded Gauls who had lived so long under the license of their impure ethnic religion. There must be no indulgence of "the flesh." That is absolutely incompatible with a life in the Spirit. In closing the apostle drops to particular advice calculated to preserve the harmony and purity of the Galatian church. Personal ambition and self-consciousness are to be merged into the general welfare. No one is to desire vain glory, much less to challenge a brother as one inferior to himself. Such a spirit must not even be indulged in by secretly envying another. Out of the subjective realm of the passions of the heart the apostle now carries his injunctions to the objective realm of actual deeds. Even if a man should be an over-achiever, a martyr, a saint, the effort of the church should be to cure not to crush such an one. The liability of the persecutor to a similar offense should beget humility. In place of the old ceremonial law now effete, stands the new law of Christ, which is efficient. The essence of this law is love which makes itself efficient in service. Brothers of Christ are to be brothers of each other and fulfill the fraternal obligation implied. But the individual does not lose his identity in the mass of believers. Each is to test himself to subject his motives and deeds to the hot assay of self-examination. In that case he will be glad not because some one approved him in sincere and groundless flattery.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.
The apostle does not hesitate to inject in these personal advice, the universal duty of ministerial support, saying in effect, "If a man has given you the bread and water of life, should you hesitate in the matter of supplying him with bodily and temporal food?" But this is as if in parenthesis and the apostle rushes on with solemn injunctions with reference to the spiritual life. Lord of all harvests cannot be deceived or mocked. A man gets what he sows, that and that only. Flesh, corruption! Spirit, everlasting life! Great are the encouragements to perseverance in the cultivation of the field of the spirit, and chiefest of them all is the certainty of success. The apostle flies back again to the collective life of believers and enjoins the duty while time and opportunity remain of doing good universally, and particularly to the common home of faith.

There is scarcely a more striking example of the vision division of chapters in the Bible than this. The force of the apostle's appeal is sadly marred and the trend of his thought arrested by the artificial division of the fifth and sixth chapters. In the close of chapter fifth a danger signal is flashed against provoking and envying, essentially sins against brotherhood of believers. It is as if the apostle should say, "have you against too great a severity in disciplining of ones which admit of doubt." Now one must pass over the artificial break in the chapters to trace the connection of the apostle's thought. It is as if he should say "I now go a step further in this matter of church discipline and say that even if a man should be detected in what is clearly an overt act, even in such cases yours is not the part to crush such an one, but if possible to cure him." The persecutor must not forget that witness and trespasser share the same human nature and are alike open to temptation and lapse. So in every instance first effort must be one of recovery.

June 11, 1916. Philippians IV. 1-13. THE WILL AND THE WAY.
When asked to describe the Epistle to the Philippians in a single word a lady answered "Joyous!" Nothing could be more apt, but the paradox of it is that the letter is addressed to a city where the apostle suffered illegal and barbarous treatment. It also bears the postmark of Rome where he was awaiting martyrdom. But that is the stupendous miracle of religion. In every state, abused or abounding, the Christian is content. He knows he has only to make his request known to God. The peace of God, immeasurable by man, preserves his heart and mind. The things that are honest, pure, lovely, and of good report are the subjects of his meditation. The consciousness of the strength of Christ within makes him equal to the heaviest draft which any emergency can make upon him. Next to Jesus himself St. Paul is probably the consummate example of this moral equipoise. He can say without suspicion of exaggeration, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content."

AMUSEMENTS PLANNED FOR DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
St. Louis, June 9.—Automobile rides around St. Louis, a steamboat excursion on the Mississippi, and rides through Forest Park, the largest natural park in the United States except Yellowstone, is part of the entertainment prepared for delegates and visitors to the democratic national convention in St. Louis, June 14.

Shaw's Garden will be another point of interest. The reception committees will include it on the sight-seeing tours.

Clark Griffith's Washington Senators will be here during the convention days for a series with Jones, Federal Brown aggregation, and special arrangements have been made to have large delegations visit Sportsman's Park to see them battle.

Visiting newspapermen and the national committee will be entertained at a dinner Monday, June 12, at Sunset Inn, a beautiful lodge in St. Louis county. A special cabaret program is being arranged.

Devices Takes Place of Nets.

One way of catching herring is by driving nails into a board so that they stick out several inches. The boards are then dragged through the shoals and the fish catch between the nails and are pulled by the board into the boats. In one year more than 1,000,000 pounds of herring were caught at Prince Rupert and frozen by the cold-storage plants to be sold for bait. Something like 125,000 pounds of codfish are annually taken for the same purpose.—The Christian Herald.

Honey Vinegar.

Vinegar made from honey has an exceptionally fine flavor and is not expensive. A small amount of honey furnishes a large amount of vinegar. Follow these directions: Dissolve thoroughly in two gallons of warm, soft water one quart jar of extracted honey. Give it air and keep it in a warm place where it will ferment and make excellent vinegar.

St. Louis, Mo., June 9.—Special precautions are to be taken by the National Conventions association to prevent imposition on visitors to St. Louis during the democratic national convention. At the request of the association, the executive committee of the Business Men's League adopted resolutions declaring visitors to be particular guests and specifying a desire for their protection.

All taxicab, "jitney bus" and other vehicle rates as well as room rates in large and small hotels will be published by the association, and it will operate a service bureau in the Union Station, where visitors can get whatever information or assistance they may need.

The object of these precautions is to obviate the least chance of imposition. The association expects to go so far as to take up any just complaint of any visitor and prosecute.

Struggle for Verity.

An old colored man who was before Judge Sanford for drunkenness and had his sentence suspended, largely on account of his age, which must be nearly eighty years, in an effort to brace up his reputation for truth and veracity remarked to one of the court officers: "I always means and intends to tell de troof, I does, even if I has to He a little to do it."—Berkshire Courier.

If you have a rug, a couch or any other article of household furniture to get rid of, use a Gazette want ad. It will surely sell it.

An old colored man who was before Judge Sanford for drunkenness and had his sentence suspended, largely on account of his age, which must be nearly eighty years, in an effort to brace up his reputation for truth and veracity remarked to one of the court officers: "I always means and intends to tell de troof, I does, even if I has to He a little to do it."—Berkshire Courier.

St. Louis, Mo., June 9.—Special precautions are to be taken by the National Conventions association to prevent imposition on visitors to St. Louis during the democratic national convention. At the request of the association, the executive committee of the Business Men's League adopted resolutions declaring visitors to be particular guests and specifying a desire for their protection.

All taxicab, "jitney bus" and other vehicle rates as well as room rates in large and small hotels will be published by the association, and it will operate a service bureau in the Union Station, where visitors can get whatever information or assistance they may need.

EAST TRACK STARS HAVE NOTHING ON WESTERN ATHLETES

Record Made at Evanston Go to Show East Need Not Stick Up Their Nose at the Western Teams.

New York, June 9.—Exceptional performances have been the rule in the intercollegiate track and field meets during the season which closed with the western conference games at Chicago on June 3. New records were frequent not only from the various association standpoints but national and international as well. Meredith of Pennsylvania, Simpson of Missouri, Murray of California, Diamond of Chicago, Mucks of Wisconsin and several others starred during the spring in the role of record breakers.

With this unusual flat at the eastern end of the Pacific coast, east and middle west, competing, a comparison of the results at the championship meets is of more than ordinary interest. A triangular contest between the winners of the Pacific, western and eastern title games would produce such close finishes that any forecast of the result would be at best mere guessing. This is clearly shown by a comparison of the times or distances of the winners in the intercollegiate and conference games held respectively on May 27 at Cambridge, Mass., and June 3 at Chicago, Ill. The situation is further complicated by the fact that Michigan, a middle western university, was represented at the eastern meet while the Pacific coast was represented at both games.

Two Smiths Equal.
Smith of Michigan and his namesake from Wisconsin won the "hundred" in 10 seconds at the eastern and western meets respectively. In the 220, More of Princeton and Smith of Wisconsin also tied so far as time is concerned with 29.5 seconds. A third tie occurred in the 440, Meredith of Penn., and Diamond both running the quarter in 47.5 seconds, a new world's record for a race around one turn. The first break in the series of ties is found in the series of 880, which Meredith won at Cambridge.

An even break of honors occurred in the longer distance races: Windward of Cornell winning the intercollegiate mile in 4 minutes 15 seconds, to Moson's conference victory in 4 minutes 20.5 seconds. Stout of Chicago was faster in the two mile than Potter of Cornell, the respective times being: Stout, 9 minutes 29.5 seconds; Potter, 9 minutes 33.5 seconds. The east was entirely outclassed in the hurdle races. Murray of California won the intercollegiate events with 15 seconds for the 120 and 24.5 seconds for the 240, while Simpson of Missouri won over the high hurdles in 14.5 seconds and the low in 23.5 seconds.

Better at Jump.
In the high and broad jumps the tables were reversed, as Oler of Yale cleared the bar at Cambridge at 5 feet 3 1/2 inches, while Fisher of Chicago leaped 5 feet 1 1/2 at the conference games. Worthington of Dartmouth broad jumped 24 feet 3 1/2 inch at the eastern contest; Pogue of Illinois doing 23 feet 1 1/2 inch in the west. Pogue of Cornell was 2 1/2 inches better in the pole vault than the quartet of vaulters who tied at 12 feet in the conference meet. Gildersleeve of California won both the eastern and western having thrown 33 feet 1 inch and 153 feet 1 inch, respectively. Liveredge of California took the intercollegiate shot-put title with a put of 46 feet 3 1/2 inches and also won the conference event with 47 feet 5 inches, but was disqualified upon an eligibility check. Mucks of Wisconsin with a put of 46 feet 8 inches.

Record Not Changed.
Incidentally it can be stated upon good authority that Ted Meredith's 440 yard record of 47.5 seconds will not displace Maxey Long's figure of 47.5 seconds on the Amateur Athletic Union record lists. When the season's record-breaking performances are considered at the annual meeting of the A. A. U. in November, Meredith will be credited with a record for the quarter around one turn, whereas Long's figure will stand as the best for a two-turn course. The same will hold good in the case of Bingo Diamond, the University of Chicago sprinter, who tied Meredith's time a week later. The distinction is made in view of the fact that in the A. A. U. championship games to be held at Newark, N. J., in September, straightaway on one side similar to the Cambridge and Evanston tracks will be used, which will give but one turn in the quarter and three in the half mile.

CARMAN SMITH ELECTED CAPTAIN OF TRACK TEAM

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., June 9.—Carmen Smith of Bay City, Mich., was elected captain of the 1917 University of Wisconsin track team at a meeting of the individual state of the western conference meet at Evanston last week. Smith, taking first place in both the dashes and second in the broad jump.

If Connie Mack had two more such pitchers as Myers and Bush it is hard to tell how high the Athletics would finish.

MORRIS MILLER

Lynn has turned Coco Woodman adrift. Coco was a great prospect a couple of years ago, and a whole ball team was offered for him at once. Then he jumped to the Feds. His experience with the outlaws seems to have put him on the hummer.

Scott Hudson, former Grand Circuit driver, who of late years has been conducting an extensive business in mules at Atlanta, Ga., is to have charge of the Grand Circuit meeting at Atlanta following Lexington next October. Hudson was one of the greatest trainers and drivers in the business and is particularly well known to Clevelanders, as one day back in 1912 he drove four winners one afternoon and the Hudson-Gatcomb combination took $40,000 out of the pool box.

Harry Alron, the eighteen-year-old Boston lad, who set a record for the Boston Light swim last summer, will undertake to better the time for the return trip over the same course next month. Owing to the icy temperature of the water this is one of the hardest of the classic American tests of endurance. Charles Torb, another Bostonian, made the present record for the double journey. It stands at 15 hours, 47 minutes.

A. W. Tillinghast, writing in the May issue of the Golf Illustrated, tells this one: A certain Philadelphia golfer was playing over the Merion course. His caddy was a boy who was accustomed to carry another nearby course, and consequently was quite familiar with the ability of his employer. Evidently a badly topped drive at the start did not engender a very exalted opinion. "Do you think I can get there with my iron?" queried the Merion man, estimating the distance to the green. "Sure," came the confident reply. "If you hit it often enough."

Who was it said that horse racing could never come back? There's an epidemic of sore throat in the west, and the south and the east—all caused by the multitudes who are cheering their favorites home. Of course, the betting in the east is rather timid. No one seems to know just how long or how strong or how loud to lay his odds. There's nothing so easy, if only you're in the know. But if you aren't—well, then you may be caused a momentary delay getting acquainted.

Manager Jimmy Callahan is quoted as complimenting Hans Wagner highly as a player. That's interesting. Wonder what Hans thinks of Jimmy as a manager?

Sam Crawford, during his enforced layoff, has not been idle. He has put in his time working on a new form of sliding pad which is said by those who have seen it to be a great improvement. The only drawback to its general use is that it costs about three times the ordinary pad. It will not be carried in stock by sporting goods houses, but will be furnished on order from the makers.

Nap Lajoie is still hitting, but he has changed his method. A story of a game in Philadelphia says: "One out, Lajoie pulled a single over the right wing of the inner cordon, a deft, scientific example of place hitting. In the old days Nap did not bother to place his blows. He hit so hard then that it was a matter of indifference to him whether the ball went past an infielder or through him."

Jake Becky has contributed his bit in Kansas City to make the Billy Sunday revival a financial and artistic success. Old Eagle Eye was interviewed for a story in which he said that Ty Cobb at his best is a piker alongside of what Billy Sunday was as a ball player when the present soul-saver was in his prime. You may take the records or Becky's word for it, just as you prefer.

The New York clubs have at the present time two of the best first sackers in the game. Merkle always has been a great first baseman and Pipp has developed wonderfully.

Ty Cobb is getting down to his regular business of manufacturing base hits. He started slowly, but the Georgian is a great finisher.

Truly Disappointed.
The minister hurried down the aisle and grasped the stranger's hand. "I am glad to see you with us tonight," he said. "I can see by the expression in your face that you are laboring under some deep sorrow, some great disappointment." "You're right; I came in here thinking this was a movie, and, having got in, I didn't have the nerve to get up and walk out."

ONLY ONE GAME IS PLAYED IN "MAJORS"

Otto Knabe Is Secured By Manager Tinker for the Cubs.—Cleveland and Washington Play Tie.

Cleveland and Washington played the only game in either the American or National leagues Thursday, rain preventing the other games scheduled in both the east and west.

These two teams played fourteen innings to a tie, five to five. Washington acquired a lead of five runs in the first inning, after an error had spoiled the chance to retire the side without a score. Cleveland played an uphill game and tied the count in the ninth inning, driving Harper from the mound.

Otto Knabe, second sacker for the Pittsburgh club, was secured by Manager Joe Tinker to fill the infield gap for the Chicago club through the release of Doolan and Yerkes. Knabe will join the Cubs today, but Tinker does not appear willing that the ex-Pirate play second at once for the Chicago club. Knabe broke into the spotlight of baseball with the Phillies, but jumped to the Baltimore Federal league team to become a manager. When the outlaw circuit died he was without a job and was taken in by the Pirates, who found his contract too high to fill. It is said that the Chicago club does not assume the war contract, and that Knabe has only been signed for this season.

"A sensible cigarette—that's what I want"

There are a number of good cigarettes on the market—Fatimas are not the only ones.

But Fatimas are the best-liked and best-selling of all cigarettes costing over 5c.

Of course, your taste may be different—you may not like Fatimas as well as all these thousands of other men do.

But you can't deny that they are worth trying—not only for the delicious taste that has made them so famous, but also to see just how SENSIBLE they really are—sensible because Fatimas are cool and comfortable to the throat and tongue at all times and because they leave no "mean" or "heady" feeling even though you may smoke more often than usual.

If you would prove how really sensible a cigarette can be—try Fatimas.

COMMON AMERICAN BIRDS

INTERESTING INFORMATION ABOUT THEM
SUPPLIED BY THE BUREAU OF BIOLOGICAL SURVEY OF THE UNITED STATES DEPART-MENT OF AGRICULTURE

YELLOW-BELLIED SAPSUCKER

(Sphyrapicus varius)

Length, about eight and one-half inches. Only woodpecker having top of head from base of bill red, combined with a black patch on breast.

Range: Breeds in northern half of the United States and southern half of Canada; winters in most of the state and south to Costa Rica.

Habits and economic status: The yellow-bellied sapsucker is rather alent and suspicious and generally manages to have a tree between himself and the observer. Hence the bird is much better known by its work than its appearance. The regular girdles of holes made by this bird are common on a great variety of trees; in all about 250 kinds are known to be attacked. Occasionally young trees are killed outright, but more loss is caused by stains and other blemishes in the wood which result from sapsucker punctures. These blemishes, which are known as bird pecks, are especially numerous in hickory, oak, cypress, and yellow poplar. Defects due to sapsucker work cause an annual loss to the lumber industry estimated at $1-250,000. The food of the yellow-bellied sapsucker is about half animal and half vegetable. Its fondness for ants counts slightly in its favor. It eats also wasps, beetles (including, however, very few wood-boring species), bugs, and spiders. The two principal components of the vegetable food are wild fruits of no importance and cambium (the layer just beneath the bark of trees). In securing the cambium the bird does the damage above described. The yellow-bellied sapsucker, unlike other woodpeckers, thus does comparatively little good and much harm.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, June 9, 1876.—East Milwaukee street and a portion of South Main street were relieved of some of their dirt this morning.
The remnants of a runaway, the hind wheels, body and top of a buggy, were left on the sidewalk on North
Bluff street last night.
The steamers had all the patronage they could attend to yesterday, especially after the breaking of the gear wheel on the large boat.
The street sprinkling men are becoming disgusted with the managers of the weather. For several days they have read signs of ruin, but each day has but proved the fallacy of human prophecies.
West Milwaukee street merchants enjoyed the luxury of standing in their doors and seeing the pavement cleared by machinery this morning.
The machine is manufactured by William H. Hiner of Fond du Lac and leaves the street in fine condition for travelers.
The runaway of a meat wagon on North Main street this noon, although of short duration, was remarkably effective in disturbing things, upsetting a democrat wagon and leaving the box in the street.

AMERICANS ORDERED TO SELL SECURITIES OR PAY A HEAVY TAX

U. S. Citizens, Residents in England, Must Dispose of American Securities Under Income Tax Law.

(By Associated Press.)

London, June 9.—Americans domiciled here who are subject to the income tax, must sell or deposit with the British government their American securities, under penalty of an extra two shilling tax. This information is given to the Associated Press today by an official of the American Dollar Security company. The ruling holds whether the securities are held here or in America.

The tax of two shillings added to income tax will apply to Americans who have resided here long enough to become subject to the regular income tax, the incidence which will be followed except that no abatement will be granted on American securities which appear on the government list. If American securities are deposited with the government, only the usual income tax with ordinary abatement will be charged, but the government prefers to purchase these securities outright.

In the event the American residents held in the United States in action on the part of the government will collect interest and pay it to the owners in sterling. American residents holding such securities in America must either deposit them with the government or sell them to the government through the agencies of J. P. Morgan company, New York. It is not unlikely that when this ruling becomes generally known there will be a departure of wealthy Americans leaving England.

The American embassy and consulate have been besieged of late by American residents seeking information on this point, many of whom threaten to leave the country unless the government makes an exception in their favor. A number of the Dollar Security committee, who discussed this matter today, was very positive all residents subject to the regular income tax will be liable to penal addition unless they dispose of their American holdings. Residents who are now liable to attack on unearned income, will be compelled to pay five shillings on the pound, while those to whom the surtax applies, will pay still more unless they meet the government's demands.

ADVISES CHAIRMEN ON ROAD DRAINAGE

Matter of Preventing Water Standing on Highways of First Importance Says Highway Commission.

In a letter sent out to the township chairmen throughout the state, the state highway commission urges the necessity of better surface and sub-surface drainage of all roads. Attention paid to this feature of road building and repair will be the difference between success and failure in road work, according to the letter, which is as follows:

Reports from our employees, personal inspections, and reports from others, indicate that the past two months or more have probably seen the ordinary roads in Wisconsin in worse condition than at any time in recent years. Probably due to great depth of frost, and the fact that because of cold weather this frost has gone out very slowly, there have been excessive accumulations of water near the surface of the ground which have caused the roads to be much worse than usual. Surface drainage has been lacking, and underground drainage, or tile drainage is almost unknown.

It is especially noticeable that at or near the top of any hill of even moderate height, there has been almost invariably a place badly cut through and practically impassable. All in all, the general condition of roads has been much worse than it should be, considering the demands of modern travel. We urge town boards to have marked, before evidences of these sink holes and springy places disappear, the place of their occurrence, and sometime during this year to have the side ditches well opened alongside all of these points so that surface water will be carried off promptly and freely, and in the worst of these places there should be put in a line of four or six inch tile at the side of the ditch which is next to the higher ground, draining out to some suitable outlet, backfilling, and packing with coarse gravel or small stone. Care as to surface drainage and placing of tile at these spring holes will yield astounding results next spring in the bettered condition of road surfaces.

It is several times during the summer you will have the road superintendents go over the roads in their charge immediately after the rains, mark the points where water is held in the ditches, and when the roads dry out, deepen the ditches so as to enable the water to get away from these points, good results will also be secured. The trouble with all roads this spring may be summed up in the few words "lack of drainage."

We trust that your board will give this matter serious attention and that they will set aside as much of the town's road money as practicable this year to securing an improvement in drainage conditions. We can think of no way in which road money can be spent to better advantage than by making this spring holes at this time, curing them with open ditches or tile drain, or both, when they dry up, and after rains this summer marking all places where water stands in the road ditches, afterward correcting these road ditches so that the water will flow freely and quickly along and away from the road.

We sincerely hope that the town board will take up these matters and direct your pathmasters accordingly. We believe that this drainage matter is much more important than just running over of your road mileage with the road machine without the drainage attended to. Road grading and road dressing are excellent and drainage is first provided for, but practice is useless if it has not been provided for. If you can't get both the drainage and road machine work done, by all means give up the road machine work and give up the road machine work.

We may say that a few of the state highways have not been entirely free from the faults pointed out above, and we are going to make this year even greater efforts to make certain that state roads built in 1916 have proper drainage, both surface and tile.

Cannot everybody working together make 1916 a year distinguished in the road history of Wisconsin? The fact that more intense and intelligent action was taken in that year to secure proper drainage on all roads than ever before in the history of the state?

We are with the kindest regards, your fellow workers in the road improvement business.

The Wisconsin Highway Commission.

BACKWARD WEATHER MOST DISCOURAGING

Hinders Growth of Young Plants in Seed Beds and Delays Transplanting of Crop.

Continued rains of this week and the cold weather has been most discouraging to tobacco growers of southern Wisconsin. Plant beds are in making the expected advancement, but the growers have been able to put the time on their fields preparing them for transplanting the crop. However, some little start has been made in planting the crop, which ought to be well under way the coming week if favored with suitable weather conditions, says the Edgerton Reporter.

This can be accomplished by the 20th if it will come within the usual dates for this state. A crop that occupies the field only from seventy-five to ninety days usually has ample time to mature if planted any time before July 1. Therefore growers prefer not to rush the crop out unless the size of the plants is crowding them to do so. Scarcely any complaint of shortage of plants is heard this year, and a few days of warm weather are only needed to see a general movement toward getting the crop pitched into the fields. It is in getting the crop into the fields between the dates mentioned.

NO CHANGE IN TEACHING FORCE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS: NEW TEACHER AT THE H. S.

There will be practically no changes in the teaching force of the Janesville public schools next year, was the statement of Superintendent H. C. Buell this morning. At the high school one teacher will be added to the force and the same teachers of this year will return to their work when school opens next fall. Mrs. Phillips, of the University of Wisconsin, will have classes in commercial work and history. At the present time there are eighty-one teachers employed in the public schools of the city.

ALLIES NOW TALK OF BOLD RAID ON THE GERMAN BASE

French Naval Officer Does Not Seem Worried Over Victory of German Fleet Over That of English.

(By Associated Press.)

Paris, June 9.—The allies could extend their blockade to the German coast in the Baltic and neutralize the strategic advantages of the Kiel canal, according to Vice-Admiral Degouty of the French navy.

The first of the necessary operations to accomplish this, he points out, would be an attack up the canal by an aerial force of 150 to 200 units divided into flotillas of 20 or 30 machines each. One of the flotillas would attack the bridge of Grunthal, one the bridge of Reidsburg, and the other the bridge of Levensau, while three other flotillas held in reserve would repeat the attack after an interval of 24 to 40 hours. The first flotilla would repeat the attack after the time required for taking on fresh supplies and the reserve flotillas would follow again as before.

This continuity of attack from the air upon works known to be vulnerable by reason of the instability of the soil in certain places and the insufficient reinforcement of certain bridge heads after the enlargement of the canal, would add to the danger, assure obstruction of sufficient duration; whatever defensive measures the Germans might take against these concerted attacks would not prevent fruitful results.

Base is Doubtful. While the base from which such air assaults might be made is only limited at present, Admiral Degouty, an operation speedily executed would, according to his theory, make possible a landing at isolated points on the German coast where the sufficient fortification so as fully to protect the establishment of an immense aviation camp within 60 to 80 miles of the canal terminus.

The forcing of the straits and mine fields would involve considerable losses from submarines and mines, but the entire fleet would get into effective contact either with the German battle fleet or the defenses of the Elbe, the admiral declares, but he did not think this should be considered prohibitive of the effort. Admiral Degouty discards the hypothesis that the German fleet under present conditions is so mobile that it could meet an attack at either end of the canal, since it requires only twenty-four hours to pass through the Elbe and the canal to the North Sea.

Have Enough Ships. The entire allies could put into action 110 vessels of the line, of which 20 are dreadnoughts and 20 are protected cruisers, against 44 German dreadnoughts and three or four battle cruisers, according to the admiral's estimate. The Russian fleet is not included in these figures, but Admiral Degouty points out that even if the Russians could not join the British and French fleets they would detach a certain number of the big German units so as to enable the allies to present at both ends of the canal a more numerous force outnumbering the entire German fleet.

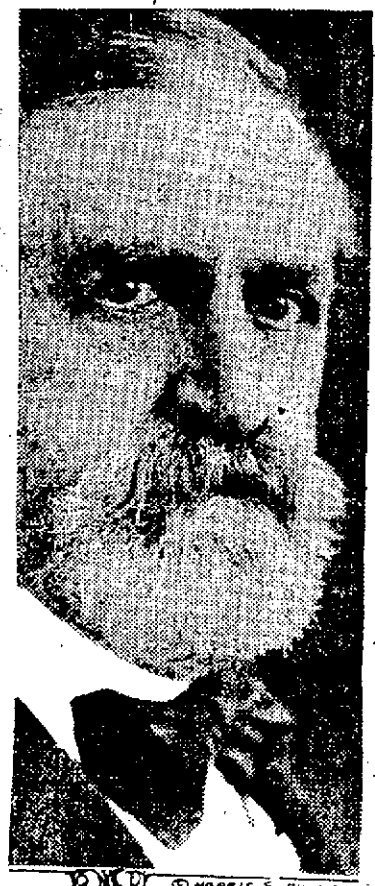

It is estimated that even if the probable losses in accounting the positions, and hence the admiral holds that effective operations of the air fleet on the canal is an essential condition of a successful attack. The Langland Belt in sufficient strength to blockade the firth of Kiel and the forcing from west to east of the Fehmarn Belt. Admiral Degouty declares, is, notwithstanding the mine field and submarines, far easier than the forcing of the Dardanelles, and entirely feasible with the co-operation of an aerial fleet.

Very Much Misunderstood. "I was presented at a ball," said Jones, "to a young lady whose proportions were anything but meager. After the accustomed manner, I asked her to honor me with a dance. She replied with a desolate air: 'I am only free for the cotton and I cannot pledge myself for that, because I am not certain whether my people will be leaving before it comes off.'"

Jones thought he would seize the chance of a compliment and said: "Oh, how empty the room will seem when you have left it." You should have seen the savage look that she gave poor Jones.

ONE taste of this genuine treat—this full, rich, creamy flavor of Gund's Peerless Beer and you'll never again be satisfied with the "bitter," "hard" taste of many other beers. Gund's Peerless Beer has just enough of that appetizing "tang" and sparkle to give it the delicious zest everybody likes.

GUND'S PEERLESS BEER

For 62 years it has been just as good—just as mild, mellow, pure and wholesome. For 62 years the famous Gund standard of cleanliness and careful, skilled methods in brewing has maintained Gund's Peerless Beer in its leadership.
